My summer with Rutherford

mentor for many budding physicists. In fact, the gold foil experiment was carried out by Rutherford's graduate student Hans Geiger and undergraduate student Ernest Marsden. As we developed the SOCK activities, Amanda and I quickly meshed into a cohesive team. We also got a lot of help from others around the office who tried out our activities, offered advice, and helped us obtain supplies. The SOCK is a result of all these contributions. This summer was just one piece of the SOCK collaboration process. Each SPS chapter that receives SOCK kits organizes outreach events and puts their own spin on the activities. I hope the new SOCK inspires SPS members and students of all ages to learn from Rutherford as I have.
